WASHINGTON BEAT

By the Herald Tribune Washington Staff

Some official hackles have been raised because of a new book about the CIA by veteran Washington newsman Andrew Tully. In a short note at the book's beginning, Tully thanks several prominent persons for talking with him about the secret agency. But, it's learned, he has received letters from some requesting that if new editions are printed, their names be deleted. Among them: Allen W. Dulles, the CIA's ex-Chief, and Pierre Salinger, President Kennedy's Press Secretary. Best guess for the reason: Tully has some unkind things to say about the CIA under Dulles.
